“A celebration of community—and a commitment to keeping the library at the heart of it.”

OUR STORY

A Bedrock Institution Worth Fighting For

The Hussey-Mayfield Memorial Public Library has stood at the center of community life in Zionsville and Whitestown since 1896. For 130 years, HMMPL has been the place where children fall in love with reading, where job seekers gain access to technology and resources, where seniors find connection, and where families discover that the best things in life are still free. It is not merely a building full of books. It is infrastructure—as essential to this community as its roads, parks, and schools.

Today, HMMPL serves tens of thousands of Boone County residents every year across its Zionsville and Whitestown branches. Its programs span early literacy, digital literacy, maker education, homebound delivery, and a Library of Things that puts tools, technology, and creative resources within reach of every resident—regardless of income.

"The library doesn't just serve the community. For many residents, it is the community—the common ground where Zionsville and Whitestown come together, regardless of background or circumstance."

THE CHALLENGE

Funding Is Under Pressure. Services Are at Stake.

Recent and drastic reductions in public funding have created serious financial pressure on HMMPL's ability to sustain the hours, staffing levels, and programs our community has come to depend on. Without meaningful community investment, the library faces the prospect of reduced operating hours, curtailed programs, and diminished services—impacts that will fall hardest on the residents who rely on the library most.

 WHAT'S AT STAKE

Funding cuts are not hypothetical. The pressure is real, and the decisions are imminent. The HMMPL Golf Classic is one of the most direct ways our business community can respond—ensuring that the library remains fully resourced to serve every resident of Zionsville and Whitestown for years to come.

The inaugural HMMPL Golf Classic was created precisely for this moment. It is a celebration of community, a gathering of local leaders and neighbors, and a direct investment in keeping HMMPL strong. Every sponsorship dollar goes to work immediately—protecting the programs and services that make this library irreplaceable.
